

The Contrarian: Taylor Foster-Allen

Some things will never make sense. She's a top fashion model who keeps bags packed for Paris, Milan and London. And on the weekends? She's up at 4 a.m. baking pecan bars and brownies for her Delaware County café and bakery, aptly named Heaven.

When people asked, 'What do you want to be when you grow up?' I said I wanted to be a bakery. Yes, a 'bakery.' Growing up it was definitely an emotional outlet. I would just throw myself into the kitchen if something was going on, and I would start baking, and things would start piling up, and it didn't matter. Then I would find someone to give it all to.

[Now] it's about the community that you build, and the incredible feeling of watching someone enjoy something you've made.
